++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Early mist and fog clearing to give some bright spells.

Today:
Fog and low cloud slowly lifting during the morning, with most places brightening up. Staying largely dry but the odd shower or pocket of drizzle remains possible. Feeling fairly mild. Maximum temperature 14 deg C (57 deg F).

Tonight:
Skies may briefly become clearer for a time this evening, but clouding over once again overnight with freshening southerly winds and showery rain for some areas. Remaining mild. Minimum temperature 7 deg C (45 deg F).

Friday:
Windy with a chance of coastal gales in the west at first. Showers are likely at times, heaviest in the west. Some bright or sunny intervals are also possible. Maximum temperature 14 deg C (57 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Largely dry and cloudy over the weekend, with some sunshine at times and remaining fairly mild. Staying similar on Monday but feeling a little colder. Frosty where skies clear overnight.
